

Research and Literature Review

Overview of Research Organisations

There is a range of different networks where you can access information on racism in sport and cultural diversity in sport. These include:

National Sport Information Centre

The National Sport Information Centre was established with the merging of the Australian Institute of Sport and the Australian Sports Commission. It is Australia's premier information resource centre for sport and related disciplines. The centre is based within the Australian Institute of Sport campus in Canberra and works cooperately with the members of the Australasian Sport Information Network.

See www.ausport.gov.au/nsic/

State and territory sport libraries

Many of the states and territories have established small sport libraries within their Department of Sport or State Institute/Academies of Sport. Rather than developing extensive collections in each state, they work cooperately in the dissemination of information and make up the Australasian Sport Information Network (see below).

Australasian Sport Information Network

The Australasian Sport Information Network comprises Australian sports information providers who cooperate with each other by sharing expertise, information and experiences, as well as promoting and developing sports information management. Members of the network include:

- National Sport Information Centre
- NSW Tourism, Sport and Recreation – www.dsr.nsw.gov.au/
- Northern Territory Institute of Sport – www.dcdsca.nt.gov.au/dcdsca/intranet.nsf/pages/sr_sport_ntis
- Queensland Academy of Sport – www.qasport.qld.gov.au/services/information_centre.cfm
- Tasmanian Institute of Sport – www.tis.tas.gov.au/
- Victorian Institute of Sport – www.vis.org.au/
- Western Australian Department of Sport and Recreation – www.dsr.wa.gov.au/
- South Australian Sports Institute – www.recSPORT.sa.gov.au/sasi/resource-centre.html

Standing Committee on Recreation and Sport (SCORS) Research Group

The SCORS Research Group is a sub-committee of the Standing Committee on Recreation and Sport. It consists of representatives from each of the state and territory departments of recreation and sport, the Australian Sports Commission and the Commonwealth Department of Communications, Information Technology and the Arts.

The group's role is to improve the range and quality of information about sport and recreation, including data and research on physical activity trends, sport and recreation participation, economic impacts and social benefits.

Its current information priorities include: children's and adult's participation in sport and recreation; barriers and motivators to participation; involvement in organised sport; and Indigenous sports participation.

See www.ausport.gov.au/scorsresearch/aboutus.asp

National Sport and Recreation Industry Database and Directory

The National Sport and Recreation Industry Database and Directory contains thousands of tables of information on sport and recreation assembled from various unpublished Australian Bureau of Statistics data collections. It can be viewed at Sport and Recreation Victoria, by calling (03) 9666 4200 to make an appointment.

Australian Society for Sports History

The Australian Society for Sports History is one of the largest sports history organisations in the world, incorporating members largely from Australia and New Zealand, but also from countries globally. The society aims to promote, stimulate and encourage discussion, study, research and publications on sporting traditions, with special reference to Australia. It also aims to publish study materials and liaise with interested individuals and institutions. It produces Sporting Traditions, a journal that promotes the study of sport in society, whose articles deal with the economic, political, social, legal and philosophical significance of sporting activity.
