The average full-time weekly wage for a woman is 15.3% less than a man's.¹

¹ Source: ABS 2018.
Gender Equality

$1
The average full-time weekly wage for a woman is 15.3% less than a man’s.¹

85c

$270,710
average super payout for men

$157,050
average super payout for women

WOMEN ON THE BOARDS OF ASX 200 LISTED COMPANIES HAS GROWN FROM 8.3% IN 2009 TO 26.2% IN 2018³

1 in 2
mothers reported experiencing workplace discrimination as a result of their pregnancy, parental leave or on return to work, while

1 in 3
women have experienced physical or sexual violence since the age of 15

1 in 5
women have experienced violence by a partner since the age of 15⁵

68%
Australian women account for:
68% of primary carers
70% of primary unpaid carers for children
58% of primary unpaid carers for the elderly and people with disability or long-term health condition⁶

1 in 5
matures indicated that they were made redundant, restructured, dismissed, or that their contract was not renewed⁶

Women spend almost twice as many hours each day performing unpaid care work compared to men¹

64.4% of the total work day for women
36.1% of the total work day for men

Australia ranks 48th in the world in terms of female political empowerment (the representation of women in politics). This is down from 32nd in 2006⁴.

In 2015-2016, average superannuation balances for women aged 60-64 were just over half (58%) those of men.²

Gender equality

In recent decades, women in Australia have made significant strides towards equality with men. At universities, in workplaces, in boardrooms and in government, a growing number of women have taken on leadership roles, forging pathways for other women and girls to follow.

In 1984, the Sex Discrimination Act came into force, making sex discrimination and sexual harassment across various parts of public life against the law.

The Act, which gives effect to Australia’s international human rights obligations, has played an important role in changing community attitudes and helping advance gender equality in this country.

Despite this progress, women and girls continue to experience inequality and discrimination in many important parts of their lives, which can limit the choices and opportunities available to them.

Barriers to gender equality

• The Australian workforce is highly segregated by gender and female-dominated industries – such as aged care, child care and health and community services – have been historically undervalued. Australian women are over-represented as part-time workers in low-paid industries and in insecure work and continue to be underrepresented in leadership roles in the private and public sectors.

• More than half of women aged 18 or older have experienced sexual harassment in their lifetime.

• On average, women spend 64 per cent of their working week performing unpaid care work. They spend almost twice as many hours performing such work each week compared to men.

• In 2015-2016 the average Australian woman was reaching retirement with an average of $113,660 less superannuation than the average male. As a result, women are more likely to experience poverty in their retirement years and be far more reliant on the Age Pension.

• More than one in three Australian women has experienced physical or sexual violence in her lifetime and one in two experiences sexual harassment. It is estimated that violence against women and their children cost the Australian economy $22 billion in 2015-16.

About

• Women and girls make up just over half (50.7 percent) of the Australian population.

• While women comprise roughly 47 per cent of all employees in Australia; they take home $251.20 less than men each week (full-time adult ordinary earnings). The national gender “pay gap” is 15.3 per cent and it has remained stuck between 15 per cent and 19 per cent for the past two decades.

• Australian women account for 68% of primary carers for older people and people with disability.

• 95% of primary parental leave (outside of the public-sector) is taken by women and women spend almost three times as much time taking care of children each day, compared to men.

• In 2017, Australia was ranked 35th on a global index measuring gender equality, slipping from a high point of 15th in 2006. While Australia scores very highly in the area of educational attainment, there is still a lot of progress to be made in the areas of economic participation and opportunity and political empowerment.
Positive developments

• The number of women on the Boards of ASX-listed companies grew from 8.3 per cent in 2009 to 26.2 per cent in 2017 due in part to a diversity policy implemented by the ASX Corporate Governance Council in 2010. Increasing the number of women in corporate leadership positions is likely to significantly increase financial returns.17

• Australian men and women overwhelmingly believe (90 per cent) that men should be as involved in parenting as women.19 However, while a significant number of fathers, and in particular young fathers, would like to be able to access better workplace flexibility arrangements, men are much more likely than women to have such requests denied.20

• As of 2016, over one million Australian workers are able to take leave and enjoy other protections because of domestic violence clauses in their workplace agreement or award conditions.21

Did you know?

• Australian women have to work an extra 56 days a year to earn the same pay as men for doing the same work.22

Find out more

• Australian Bureau of Statistics, Caring in the Community, 2012 (updated June 2014)

• Australian Bureau of Statistics, Gender Indicators, Australia (latest update 2017)

• Australian Human Rights Commission, Working without fear: Results of the Sexual Harassment National Telephone Survey (2012)

• Australian Human Rights Commission, Unleashing Gender Equality (2017)

• Our Watch, Change the Story: A shared framework for the primary prevention of violence (2015)

• Australia’s National Research Organisation for Women’s Safety, Publications.

• Workplace Gender Equality Agency, Gender pay gap statistics (August 2017)

• Workplace Gender Equality Agency, Gender workplace statistics at a glance (February 2017)

Our role

The Commission helps people resolve complaints of unfair treatment under the Sex Discrimination Act, including discrimination on the basis of sex, marital (or relationship) status and pregnancy. The Act also protects workers with family responsibilities and makes sexual harassment against the law.

The Sex Discrimination Commissioner works in partnership with a broad range of groups to promote gender equality and counter discrimination, sexual harassment, violence against women and other barriers to equality. She also undertakes major research projects and provides policy advice to government and others to bring about positive change.

Find out more about our work in this area.
2 Australian Bureau of Statistics, 6202.0 - Labour Force, Australia, Table 01: Labour force status by sex (December 2017).
6 Australian Bureau of Statistics, 4125.0 - Gender Indicators, Australia, Table 10.1: Total number of hours and minutes per day spent on work (employment related and unpaid) (September 2017).
9 For example: approximately 45 per cent of women in the workforce are employed part-time compared with around 16 per cent of men. See: Australian Bureau of Statistics, 4125.0 – Gender Indicators, Summary – Economic Security (September 2017); women make up only 5 percent of CEOs and only 20 per cent of executive management in ASX 200 companies (see: Chief Executive Women, Senior Executive Census 2017) and, despite making up almost 80 per cent of all Commonwealth public servants, they comprise only 43 per cent of the Senior Executive Service (see: Australian Public Service Statistical Bulletin, Tables 8 and 12 (31 December 2016).
13 Association of Superannuation Funds of Australia Ltd., Superannuation account balances by age and gender (October 2017) p 5.
15 Australian Bureau of Statistics, 4906.0 – Personal Safety, Australia – Key findings (2016).
17 Australian Institute of Company Directors, Appointments to ASX 200 Boards (updated online resource).
21 L McFerran, Domestic violence is a workplace issue; Australian developments 2009-2016 (June 2016).
22 Equal Pay Day marks the additional number of days that the average woman must work in a year to receive the same amount of pay as the average man. Equal Pay Day is calculated using the following formula: 365 days x gender gap estimate ÷ 100. Workplace Gender Equality Agency, Gender pay gap statistics (March 2014) p 4; Workplace Gender Equality Agency, Gender pay gap statistics (February 2018) p 3.